

Total – 786

Lexical units – 28

Grammar constructions – 5

Linkers – 14

Language

Did you know that in 2022, there were around 1.5 billion people worldwide who spoke English either natively or as a second language, slightly more than the 1.1 billion Mandarin Chinese speakers? It is an incredible amount considering the fact that in total, more than seven billion people live on earth.

Language is an important way of communication between people. So once Geoffrey Willans said "You can never understand one language until you understand at least two." Language - is a body of words for their use common to people of the same community or nation, the same geographical area, or the same cultural tradition. Additionally, the methodological study of language is called linguistics. The language distinguishes a country or in a region or a community.

To begin with, learning foreign languages has become a necessity and trend these days. There are several reasons to start going it. Firstly, on the educational point of view, is great for children because it improves their listening, speaking, writing and reading skills efficiently. Also, they can become bilingual. They will acquire a foreign language and still will be able to communicate in a native language. If they continue studying in adult age, they will develop accurate pronunciation, good accent, adapt to different dialects, so, they will become fluent in a language in general. Secondly, we know that communication is very important medium in companies to accomplish tasks properly. For example, if an individual, working in a company is fluent in foreign languages then he will be able to communicate well to the foreigners and will be able to handle and solve problems quite easily. Moreover, they will be able to hold intelligent conversations with native speakers and to develop relationships with people from other countries. Thus, if you are falling behind in a career, maybe it's the lack of knowledge of a foreign language. Thirdly, every foreign language has its own culture, which is unique in its own. So, learning a foreign language allows an individual to build trusting relations across different societies and to enable people to communicate between cultures, which includes learning mythologies, rules, principles, deities, holy shrines and many more things of other cultures. That is why Language has no existence without culture.

In my opinion, the best language learners are people who started doing it in their childhood. They have picked up the basics of a language and then have started learning it every day not only to receive a certificate, but also because it's interesting for them. And, after all, they ended up speaking a foreign language fluently.

English is a widely-spoken language. For instance, English is spoken all over the world as a first and second language. One of the reasons you may be learning English is because it's the working language of the United Nations, which means it's worldwide popularity is undoubtable. English is spoken in around 70 different countries. There's a reason why it is one of the most common second languages. That is because English - is the lingua franca of computing, technology and science. Also it is one of the most commonly used languages across the internet. There are so many benefits to learning English. In fact, one of them is that learning English can give you a broad understanding of new age culture.

As far as I am concerned, Chinese will become a global language in future. It will dominate diplomacy and prominent in international business as soon as China will become the largest economy in the world, which I think is already happening.

Nowadays people spend the most part of their day online. They use social media, messengers etc. As a result, we may have problems online. As an illustration, someone can steal your identity and post your personal information. When you are chatting, you can struggle making grammar mistakes. Which are fixable by proofreading your text and by keyboard application. Sometimes you use inappropriate language. For example, unintelligent people often misunderstand when it's time to use formal or informal language, what register to use.

To prevent these things from happening there are some advice: to use secure passwords, to use privacy settings. And to avoid confusion, which are created by your language, you can firstly define a register, secondly use correct your grammar and spelling, and finally - find the right balance between being formal and informal.

To sum up, language is an arbitrary symbol system that is both rule-governed and socially agreed upon. Language is what we utilize to communicate with other people. It is a powerful instrument to build trusting relations across different societies and to enable people to communicate between cultures. Being able to talk at cross purposes is a great opportunity.